MONDAY, JUNE 5 - DAY 1: DEPART USA

Embark upon your journey with an overnight flight to Athens.

TUESDAY, JUNE 6 - DAY 2: ATHENS, THESSALONIKI

Arrive in Athens mid-afternoon and are met by our representative and given the tickets for our flight to Thessaloniki.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7 - DAY 3: THESSALONIKI, PHILIPPI, KAVALA

In the morning we start with the landmarks of the city: the White Tower, the Walls of the Byzantine Acropolis to see the famous funerary Lion of Amphilopolis, the Roman Arch of Galerius and the Rotonda, Christian churches, the Basilicas of St. Demetrius and St. Sophia (Divine Wisdom). We then on to Philippi to visit the Baptistry of Lydia near the river where Paul baptized her and the ruins of the Forum of Philippi, the Christian Basilicas, the "Prison of Paul" and the Theater. Then we drive to Kavala (Neapolis), Paul's first step in bringing the Gospel to present-day Europe. We also view the Byzantine Castle and the Roman Aqueduct. We return to Thessaloniki for dinner and overnight.

THURSDAY, JUNE 8 - DAY 4: METEORA, ATHENS

This morning we see the Byzantine monasteries perched on summits of gray rock peaks of varied and beautiful shapes where the monks sought refuge in the cliff-side caves, then fled higher to build the original wooden shelters, which were later transformed into monasteries. Afterwards we continue to Athens where we will have dinner and overnight.

FRIDAY, JUNE 9 - DAY 5: START OUR 3-NIGHT MEDITERRANEAN CRUISE

We sail from Athens to the quaint isle of Mykonos, called the island of windmills. No excursions are included today, as we will visit the island at our leisure by foot. We'll have time to experience the waterfront lined with shops and cafes before returning to the ship for dinner.

SATURDAY, JUNE 10 - DAY 6: KUSADASI, PATMOS

In the morning we arrive in Kusadasi, Turkey. Excursion included: A short drive takes us to Ephesus. The impressive remains of Ephesus include the Agora, the Theater, the Stadium, the Library of Celsus, the ruins of the Temple of Diana (one of the "Seven Wonders of the Ancient World") and many more. Later, we sail for the island of Patmos. Excursion included: Here we visit the Monastery of St. John, on one of the island's highest points, then down to the Grotto of the Apocalypse, the site of the apocalyptic Revelations of St. John the Divine.

SUNDAY, JUNE 11 - DAY 7: HERAKLION, CRETE / SANTORINI

In the morning we arrive at Heraklion, Crete and disembark. You can choose to visit the Minoan Palace of Knossos, home to king Minos and his legendary beast the Minotaur. In the Archaeological Museum of Heraklion, we can find the unbelievable works of art (pieces of sculpture and pottery, jewelry, arms, frescoes) that have been found in a number of Minoan sites all over Crete. In the afternoon, we cruise to the isle of Santorini and disembark. Santorini is often referred to as the most breathtaking of all the Greek islands.

MONDAY, JUNE 12 - DAY 8: PIREAS, CORINTH, ATHENS

We disembark in the morning at Pireas (formerly Piraeus) and continue sightseeing with a visit to Ancient Corinth, the once-glorious city near the Isthmus, where Paul met Aquilla and Priscilla and spent a year and a half preaching the Word of God. We visit the Archaeological Museum, the Forum, the Temples and the famous Bema, where Paul stood before Gallio, accused by the Jews of Corinth. Then we drive to Cenchreae, the little harbor from which Paul sailed back to Asia, ending his second missionary journey. We'll follow our guide to the world-renowned Acropolis, to see the Propylea, the Erechtheum and the Parthenon. We visit Mars Hill, where Paul delivered his speech on the "Unknown God." Then we see the Agora, the ancient center of the economic and public life of the city, where Paul preached to the skeptical Athenians. During the bus tour, we also see Constitution Square with the House of Parliament and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Temple of Zeus, the Old Olympic Stadium and the Neoclassical Buildings of Athens. The afternoon is at leisure to explore Athens on your own. Dinner and overnight are in Athens.

TUESDAY, JUNE 13 - DAY 9: ATHENS, DELPHI, ATHENS

Today we include a special visit to the mountainous city of Delphi. For the ancient Greeks, Delphi was labeled the "omphalos" (navel) of the earth and it is here that the eternal flame burned in the Temple of Apollo. Delphi was the site of the Delphic oracle, the most important oracle in the classical Greek world where in 586 B.C. athletes from all over the Greek world competed in the Pythian Games, one of the precursors to the modern Olympics. Dinner and overnight are in Athens. Those taking the optional Rome extension will proceed to the Athens airport for the evening flight to Rome.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14 - DAY 10: ATHENS, U.S.A.

We transfer in the morning to Athens Airport for our return flight back to the U.S.A. We arrive home the same day.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

It is hard to believe it, but we are approaching the last few years of our vision, the Ten Pillars. With every project – as with our individual lives – it is important that we finish strong.

The Ten Pillars vision started in 2008, and here we are in 2016. We have somewhere between four and five years left to complete, or at least begin the initial planning processes for, the aspirations contained in it.

We have accomplished a lot, and the last few years of The Pillars magazine have documented the amazing progress we've made, but there is still much to do. Recently we have been having town hall meetings and various listening sessions at the University involving faculty and staff to discuss the projects we want to emphasize and recommend to the Trustees as priorities for the last few years of the vision. We are planning to have similar discussions with students and alumni to make sure we know the things that truly matter to everyone as we seek to fulfill HBU's vision. We are going to finish strong.

There is so much that we still have to do – there are academic programs and facilities to build, as well as important steps in professional development for faculty and staff that we need to take. This is a great university, and we must support our people with the training, spaces, and equipment required to provide the finest possible cutting-edge Christian education for our students.

We need science and nursing laboratories and classrooms, student services facilities, student housing, more general classrooms, more academic space for the fine arts, a special events center that will seat 5,000, and the completion of our football stadium.

We aspire to continue to grow by every means possible, emphasizing our residential experience while also expanding our online methods of delivering an HBU education. There are some exciting discussions going on by a very dynamic engineering advisory board, and we have some amazing, market-sensitive new programs being developed in the Archie W. Dunham College of Business. The School of Christian Thought and the humanities in general, including our Honors College and the development of an exciting new Center for Law and Liberty, have garnered attention worldwide while they continue to grow and expand. This coming fall The College of Education and Behavioral Sciences is starting our first doctoral program and also developing some exciting and much needed programs in our culture with respect to mental and spiritual health.

In the midst of all these areas of programmatic and facility growth, we are especially working to expand discipleship programs and build the culture of HBU based upon our historic Christian commitments.

So much has been done, but there's so much left to do. We are working hard to finish strong as we implement the objectives of our mission and vision. We need your help. Still, the year 2020 will not mark the end of God's aspirations for HBU. The Ten Pillars vision will itself lead to another vision document and to the inspiring days that will follow if, and as we remain, faithful to Christ our Lord.

Blessings,

COMPLETING THE TEN PILLARS

THE PILLARS: Do you remember the genesis of the Ten Pillars vision?

DR. SLOAN: I do. I had just come to HBU in 2006 and the first thing that I was privileged to do was to meet the staff and faculty here. I had small group meetings to learn about HBU and just get a feel for the culture. I would ask people, “okay what goes well? What do you do? What do you enjoy doing? Are there any issues or problems that we need to look at?” Because there are always things that bare improvement. And in the process of learning about HBU and learning the great history and tradition we have here I could also begin to hear their aspirations. And it was really out of those meetings that I knew that I was already getting the foundation points for what later came to be the Ten Pillars.

So fast forward a year and a half later, we started a formal process of building a vision document. We had “town hall meetings” around the campus and asked them one question: What would you like HBU to look like in the year 2020? The idea was not to put a dollar limitation on it, but to dream whatever you want about programs, buildings, culture, academic programs, athletics, etc. It was very exciting. We are a great Christian university in a great city, and that was the beginning point of the narrative because Christian universities tend to drift from their foundation, from their moorings of commitment to Christ and commitment to a scripture-informed Christianity. We don’t want to do that. We think you can be academically excellent and still be committed to Christ and to a faith that has honesty and integrity. A faith that’s willing to ask questions.

And here on campus we actually have ten pillars that came from the Galveston County Courthouse that was devastated by the 1900 storm of the century in Galveston. Those pillars remained standing. And when the courthouse was taken down, Dr. Stewart Morris and his wife Joella bought those pillars and brought ten of them to our campus. Ten is the number of strength in scripture, and there’s the Ten Commandments, so our vision document is called the Ten Pillars.

“We’re now at about 3,300 students overall and our graduate school is now at about 900 students.”

THE PILLARS: So much has happened under your leadership. You have to feel a sense of real destiny to the steps that you’ve taken.

DR. SLOAN: I really do believe the Lord has blessed HBU throughout our history. You can’t explain a place like HBU without the hand of the Lord going back even before the University was legally incorporated in 1960.

THE PILLARS: In recent months

you’ve had emphasis on finishing the Ten Pillars, give us a snap shot of what that would entail.

DR. SLOAN: Well here it is 2016 and we have only a few years left for the Ten Pillars vision. The question was “What do you want HBU to look like in the year 2020?” The goal here is to ask ourselves how can we finish strong in the implementation of the Ten Pillars vision. So a lot has been accomplished – our Honors College, for example. Starting an honors college and being in Division I NCAA athletics again – seeing the University grow in so many professional areas of education, nursing, business – those have just been huge growth areas for us. Seeing the University excel in the fine arts was one of the priorities of the Ten Pillars. Our School of Fine Arts is probably the finest private university School of Arts in America. I know that’s a bold statement, but I really believe that's true. We just recently again won what's called the Rising Eyes of Texas exhibition, where our art students were recognized. The MFA program and our Bachelor's degree in Fine Arts are gaining recognition, along with our Department of Music, which continues to grow and strengthen. It's very exciting to see under the leadership that's there.

We have a new program in creative writing that is also a part of fine arts, as well as an outstanding program in Cinema and New Media Arts. The greatest strength of HBU is in the area of theology and biblical studies – and now we have Apologetics and Christian Philosophy. The University is very strong. A lot has been accomplished and we have exciting things lined up for us in the future.

For example, on Hwy. 59 and Fondren we have that 25-acre corner of the campus, which we sometimes refer to as the Campus Edge project. It will be called The Pillars at HBU. It's a shopping center. It's a whole development that will draw great attention to the University with a retail section, a parking garage, an office building, a hotel and conference center, and a 5,000-seat arena. Brick is being put up on a beautiful retail section of that development right now. Our architectural look will be extended all the way to the front tier by the freeway. It's very exciting.

THE PILLARS: You have now entered into the digital domain through robertsloan.com and The Story of the Bible through partnership with LifeWay and its outreach on WORDsearch to nearly 400,000 churches, a precursor of a very direct and digital outreach of HBU. Can you encapsulate that?

DR. SLOAN: I'll try to. Dr. Johnston, you have been very instrumental in leading us in that area, but yes, the University now has a very exciting partnership with LifeWay. We have got Philippians, which is an online, certificate program, and I know Dr. Jeremiah Johnston, your son, has also done some wonderful things in this partnership with LifeWay and we'll be seeing faculty getting involved with them also. This LifeWay opportunity will create certificates and non-credit certificates and other opportunities that can lead to credit hours for individuals who sign up. This will expand the visibility of the University and give our faculty members a platform to teach online.

All that I've mentioned are answers to The Ten Pillars' challenge for growth. We have grown where many private universities have not. We're now at about 3,300 students overall and our graduate school is now at about 900 students.

One of the next phases of our growth will be with the traditional undergraduate and graduate student, through the online experience. For example, we currently have a partnership with Educate, which is an online program for nurses. We now have an online competency-based program that will allow a registered nurse to get a bachelor's degree in Nursing, a Bachelor of Science in Nursing. So the RN to BSN that's exclusively online.

The College of Business and our College of Education are very dynamic in this area. Even in art, classes can be taught online. The College of Education and Behavioral Sciences is going to start a whole emphasis on mental health and Christian psychology, which we think is going to explode because of the excellence of the people that we have involved. Of course we won't abandon our traditional campus. We are very strong in the philosophy area, biblical languages, and in the classical languages, and now we also have a whole new area that we call the Center for Law and Liberty where we will teach the founding principles of American democracy and the American practices of government. Things like freedom and free markets, these are very important. We think human freedom is a gift of God and it ought to have the opportunity to flourish.

THE PILLARS: We look forward to your Story of the Bible and just one final question, did you ever think you could step into an HBU studio and teach the Bible, the Book of Philippians and it be marketed digitally to 400,000 pastors?

DR. SLOAN: It's amazing. No, but right here on campus we have this gorgeous studio with cutting-edge technology and cameras. We have the ability to shoot and produce our professors' content every day and capture this content and make it available to 400,000 church members, pastors, and staff members who can study the Book of Philippians or the Story of the Bible. It is wonderful. We're glad to have the opportunity to harness the things that God gives us to be able to expand our mission, to share the gospel, to teach and to allow the expertise.

I want people to see the growth that's going take place at HBU through the online opportunities for for-credit and not-for-credit growth, very exciting.

Dr. Robert Sloan explains the Vision at hbu.edu/p53-pillars.

HOUSTON BAPTIST UNIVERSITY'S SCHOOL OF NURSING & ALLIED HEALTH

Past, Present & Future

By DR. RHONDA (RENAE) SCHUMANN

Dean, School of Nursing and Allied Health

John S. Dunn Professorship in Nursing

Professor of Nursing

Houston Baptist University's School of Nursing & Allied Health (SNAH) has a rich past with links to the present and the future. It started with the Memorial School of Nursing in what was then downtown Houston. Many young nurses, under the direction of Mrs. Lilly Jolly, learned to give the best patient care that any nursing school could offer, and they delivered that care with grace, compassion, and a sense of purpose that is understood and experienced by so few in any field. Mrs. Jolly's legacy lives on to this day as students and graduates from the School of Nursing and Allied Health continue to provide the same compassionate, purposeful care as their predecessors.

Lilly Jolly, who was the first dean of the Memorial School of Nursing, took the school from its downtown hospital setting to another location in southwest Houston. Eventually, the Memorial School of Nursing became the Lilly Jolly School of Nursing. The Lilly Jolly School became part of the HBU campus, and then renamed the School of Nursing & Allied Health. Though Mrs. Jolly had long since retired, the College held true to her standards and demanded excellence in nursing and personal practice. The College of Nursing graduated students who were well respected in the field.

Today's students and graduates from HBU's School of Nursing and Allied Health celebrate their link to the school's beginnings. The Allied Health part of the school, which houses three kinesiology degrees, joined the nursing school nearly 10 years ago to create the School of Nursing and Allied Health. Since the development of the recently established Deans Developmental Council (DDC), nursing and kinesiology students have enjoyed collaboration through programs sponsored by the DDC, and with each passing semester the contribution of the DDC to the SNAH students grows. In 2015, the DDC sponsored a Lunch and Learn event directed at all SNAH students where they received a free lunch and learned about scheduling and caring for patients in Sport Medicine Clinics.

Contributions from the DDC have included an annual fund-raising luncheon, faculty breakfasts and get togethers during final exam week, a pre-nursing orientation brunch for incoming freshman students during Welcome Days, refreshments for the nursing pinning ceremonies, and most recently the donation of the HBU nursing pin to each graduate. There is a grand vision for the SNAH, one which could not be accomplished without the help of the Deans Developmental Council.

The vision for the School includes growth in program development and enrollment through Interprofessional Education (IPE), technology, and community partnerships. When possible, the School of Nursing and Allied Health will share resources including simulation labs in the Cullen Nursing Center and in the Bradshaw Fitness Center, laptop computers purchased by the School of Nursing from the Hamill Foundation grant to be used for testing, and faculty when appropriate.

THE PRESENT

NURSING

The School of Nursing boasts small classes where faculty and students know each other, and students can benefit from the personal touch. Faculty learn students' strengths and needs, and they can work with each student towards developing strengths where needed. Nurses in the partnering clinical agencies value HBU students and graduates, and they pursue HBU graduates for employment, often before graduation. In fact, it is not unusual for 90 percent or greater of the graduating class to have multiple job offers before graduation.

HONORS COLLEGE AND ATHLETICS

Within the traditional pre-licensure student group are two specialized groups which were difficult to manage - those enrolled in the HBU Honors College, and student athletes. Nursing schools that have an honors program develop it for nursing only, and keep it separate from the university college or other groups because nursing scheduling and course work is difficult to accommodate. There is nothing in the current literature which demonstrates inclusion of the nursing students within a university-level Honors College. However, in 2013 the SNAH entered into a one-of-a-kind joint admission program with the HBU Honors College, in which highly motivated freshmen who are interested in nursing may be admitted into the Honors College and receive provisional admission to the BSN program combining the classics Honors College and the nursing courses.

The BSN Honors degree is growing in popularity each year, and students are entering the nursing curriculum earlier as a result. The BSN Honors degree produces a better educated nurse who demonstrates strong critical thinking skills and unconditional, universal compassion and acceptance for others.

An addition to the Honors College students is a specialized group of nursing student athletes with the challenges of meeting NCAA guidelines, and HBU's regulations for athletes, combined with the rules and content of the very strenuous BSN program. In the past, most student athletes have been forced to choose between sport and nursing because practice and travel schedules are often incompatible with lab and clinical schedules. Now, student athletes are admitted to the nursing program according to the season of their sport to avoid the major conflicts with travel time versus the class schedules. By using this plan, more students are able to achieve both athletic and academic goals.

The School of Nursing and Allied Health currently offers a Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) degree with four separate curriculum modalities, and three separate Bachelor of Science-Kinesiology degrees.

RN-BSN PROGRAM

In 2015, the faculty launched a separate modality for achieving a BSN degree. With the help of an enrollment management partner, Meteor Learning, the 100 percent online, competency-based RN-BSN program, where students complete the BSN degree at their own pace from their own homes. The program, which has been open less than a year, already has more than 50 students enrolled, with the first graduates expected in December of 2016.

KINESIOLOGY

Kinesiology, the study of human movement, is the “prevention” side of healthcare. The School of Nursing and Allied Health houses three separate Bachelor of Science in Kinesiology degrees. Wellness Management, which has the greatest enrollment of the three, prepares graduates to work in areas of fitness, wellness, and health promotion. Many Wellness Management graduates pursue further education, specifically in the field of Physical Therapy.

Athletic Training is a current BS degree within the SNAH. Athletic trainers work with clients who work with the sports teams. They teach proper body mechanics and assess and treat injuries associated with movement. Athletic trainers can work with other groups besides sports teams to make sure that everyone is moving safely.

This year the School will launch a Bachelor of Science degree in Sports Management, which is a combination of kinesiology wellness management and business courses. Graduates will be prepared to conduct the business of operating a gym or fitness center as well as managing intramural or similar teams.

“Partnerships with hospital systems provide students the chance to interface with the hospital leadership.”

THE FUTURE: PARTNERSHIPS

Students enjoy the benefit of partnership agreements with various clinical agencies, schools and employers, and groups. Affiliation agreements with hospitals and articulation agreements with junior colleges keep the SNAH active and in communication with stakeholders, donors, the Texas Medical Center, and the greater community.

In addition to providing student placements for nursing, clinical, and kinesiology internship practical experiences, partnerships provide opportunities for student scholarships and collaborations between faculty and agency staff which would have not been possible otherwise.

Collaborations between schools and clinical agencies or employers help college faculty stay current and relevant in their practice while informing agencies of the most effective teaching strategies or curriculum development plans for staff.

Partnerships with hospital systems provide students the chance to interface with the hospital leadership. Likewise, the partnering hospitals or other agencies can meet the students at the beginning of the educational program and possibly hire them as the student approaches graduation.

Partnerships in kinesiology include not only hospitals and clinics, but any setting where a health or safety program is required. Partnerships allow the employers and the students to learn about each other and to see the best fit.

THE FUTURE: NEW DEGREES & PROGRAM TRACKS

Needs for specialty services contribute to the growth of the SNAH. The nursing faculty have plans to enhance the program through degree offerings and modifications.

- First is the Master of Science in Nursing (MSN) which will be online, except for clinical or practicum components. The MSN, which is scheduled to launch in 2017, will have four separate tracks and one certificate program, including Nursing Education, Nursing Administration, Family Nurse Practitioner, and Pediatric Nurse Practitioner (Primary Care), then a post masters certificate, Pediatric Nurse Practitioners in Acute Care setting.
- Also in future planning is the Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) degree, designed for nurses who are Nurse Practitioners and would like the expertise in management of more complicated patients within complex healthcare systems. As with the MSN, the DNP will originally launch as a post MSN entry, then eventually transition to BSN to DNP, and maybe RN-DNP to gather the students in the completion program.
- In Spring 2017 an online Master of Science in Kinesiology with a specialty in Sport Management is scheduled to start. Students will learn the more advanced business and sport management skills to apply to teams, schools, and other employers.
- The current BS in Athletic Training has suspended enrollment as of Spring 2016 so that it can reopen as an entry-level (no BS required before it) Master of Science-Kinesiology in Athletic Training. This move is required by the governing and accrediting bodies of the athletic training profession, and as a result, the program will be able to gain accreditation in the future. As the athletic trainer scope of practice expands, so will the need for continued education. Therefore, the future SNAH also holds development of a Doctor of Athletic Training degree, whose developers have patterned it after the nursing DNP.
- Other innovations in the SNAH programs include development of a degree specific honors research program where the student partners with a faculty research mentor not only to assist the faculty with research, but also to develop and implement his or her own piece of that research. This can contribute to students' interest in graduate school and in life-long learning, which is a value of the nursing and athletic training accreditors. The SNAH honors program can be in cooperation with, or separate from, the HBU Honors College.
- Certification programs offered by the SNAH are being discussed or developed, including EKG Technician, Legal Nurse Consultant, and Nursing Leadership. The Kinesiology program currently requires Wellness Management and Athletic Training students to pass a Coaches Exam for progression to the next level.

The fields of Healthcare Administration and Childlife Specialist are in consideration for future development. Both degrees would be Master's level programs according to their accreditors.

THE FUTURE: THOUGHTS ON SHARED ACTIVITIES

The Deans Developmental Council for the SNAH will assist with raising the funds to update the nursing and kinesiology simulation labs, especially as additional equipment will be required for the respective master's degrees. Shared activities with other University colleges and students as well as the HBU community, include disaster drills where other students or faculty serve as patients, and inner city mission trips where SNAH students can perform basic assessments in area neighborhoods or centers. Both of these, as well similar events planned and implemented by the Nursing Student Association and Kinesiology Student Association, contribute to community wellness while making HBU more visible in the community and increasing students' skills and abilities.

THE PSYCHOLOGY MAJOR AT HBU

SUCCESS BEYOND THE BACHELOR'S DEGREE

The Undergraduate Psychology major at HBU represents a blend of theory, research, and practice. This 46-hour major is grounded in a curriculum designed to introduce students to a basic understanding of the scientific and systematic study of behavior and mental processes. Like most psychology programs, psychology majors at HBU learn to critically examine theories and research findings that explore the biological bases and environmental determinants of behavior. What sets HBU's program apart is that students hone these critical thinking skills within a Christian environment.

WHAT TO EXPECT - Psychology majors at HBU can expect to know their professors and for their professors to know them. Despite the popularity of psychology courses at HBU, a concerted effort is made to keep class sizes at or below an enrollment of 30. It is the philosophy of the department that smaller class sizes foster an environment that is conducive to learning course content and also facilitate more of a mentee-mentor relationship between student and professor outside of the classroom. Secondly, all psychology majors can expect to be assigned to a full-time psychology professor for advising.

In addition to fostering an environment that is conducive to learning about psychology in the classroom, it is also the aim of the program to provide opportunities for students to apply what they learn about psychology out of the classroom. For example, during their senior year, psychology majors are required to take the Psychology Capstone course, which is the culminating experience for the psychology major. Students incorporate the essential core concepts of psychology into one of two domains. Domain I focuses on an in-depth original research project and Domain II requires students to complete an externship at an approved site. Students who choose the research project are strongly encouraged to present their findings at the University's annual Celebration of Scholarship and at professional conferences such as the Texas Psychological Association.

Finally, students can expect to have their academic achievements recognized. The Psi Chi National Honor Society is one of several ways the department recognizes academic excellence.

Another way that the department recognizes academic excellence is by identifying an Outstanding Student in Psychology each year. This award is given to a senior psychology major whose achievement is recognized at the annual Honors Convocation. Another special honor is given to the psychology undergraduate who continues their graduate studies in either psychology or counseling at HBU. This student automatically receives an Alumni Scholarship from the Graduate School. However, the student also may apply for the College of Education and Behavioral Sciences Scholarship. The psychology faculty members award this scholarship based upon the strength of the student's essay and academic record.

LIFE AFTER MAJORING IN PSYCHOLOGY

The Psychology major prepares students for graduate study in psychology. Students who want to practice psychology or counseling must be licensed and earn at least a master's degree. Students who want to become a psychologist must be licensed and earn a doctorate in psychology. Students may continue their graduate studies in psychology or counseling at HBU.

The following degree programs are available: Master of Arts in Psychology – General (MAP-General), Master of Arts in Psychology – Licensed Specialist in School Psychology, Master of Arts in Counseling, and Master of Arts in Christian Counseling. All of the aforementioned programs lead to licensure with the exception of the MAP – General program. The MAP-General program is designed to prepare students for doctoral study in psychology.

There are limited “applied” employment opportunities for the student with a BA degree in psychology. The prospect for employment is brighter for the undergraduate psychology major who is seeking employment in either a non-psychology related field or seeking a staff position in a psychology-related field.

WHAT IF A STUDENT LIKES PSYCHOLOGY BUT IS NOT COMPLETELY SOLD ON MAJORING IN PSYCHOLOGY?

In addition to the Psychology major, there is the Psychology minor, which serves as a great companion to majors such as biology and Christianity. What makes the Psychology minor such a good fit for Biology and Christianity majors is that it assists with the development of the soft skills that are important for those who plan to pursue careers in medicine and the ministry. Another alternative for students to consider is the Pre-professional Art Therapy program. This program was established in 2015 and is co-sponsored by the psychology and art departments. Students who plan to become an art therapist are encouraged to consider this program prior to applying to an art therapy master's program.

Strong academic preparation within a Christian environment, a low faculty to student ratio, and opportunities to support student success beyond the bachelor's degree are several characteristics that set the psychology department at HBU apart from other programs. If you have questions about the psychology major at HBU, please contact me at rnero@hbu.edu.

HBU | HOUSTON
HOUSTON BAPTIST UNIVERSITY | THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

“Our outstanding faculty will now have the ability to provide ministry preparation in a seminary setting that is based in Houston and is specifically geared for the ministry needs of this great city.”

– ROBERT B. SLOAN, JR., PRESIDENT

Houston Baptist University recently announced the formation of Houston Theological Seminary. Classes for Houston Theological Seminary will begin this fall semester on HBU’s campus, other campuses, as well as online. Students will be able to participate in these classes in multiple ways by pursuing their Master of Divinity degree or by attending in a not-for-credit capacity.

“HBU has long emphasized the importance of ministry preparation, and we are pleased to add the Master of Divinity to our other graduate programs. Our outstanding faculty will now have the ability to provide ministry preparation in a seminary setting that is based in Houston and is specifically geared for the ministry needs of this great city,” said President Robert Sloan.

The seminary will feature innovative programs designed to train pastors for the needs in the 21st century. Resourcing distinguished experience of local church leaders and the unique and diversified scholarship of professors, ministry programs at Houston Theological Seminary will be distinctive and reflect scholarship highly applicable for ministry. “We are excited about the opportunity to impact our community and nation for Christ through the training of ministers in an educational setting where students will have excellent theoretical and practical experiences,” said HBU Provost Cynthia Simpson.

Houston Theological Seminary and the Master of Divinity program will feature professors internationally known for their research and teaching. Dean of The School of Christian Thought Dr. Craig Evans, is the John Bisagno Distinguished Professor of Christian Origins. Dr. Evans’ primary teaching focus is New Testament and background to the New Testament. He has published more than 600 scholarly studies, including more than 70 books. Among the first classes to be offered in Houston Theological Seminary will be Dr. Evans’ course on defending the Bible.

Degrees offered through Houston Theological Seminary will include Master of Arts degrees in Apologetics, Biblical Languages, Christian Leadership, Theological Studies, and the Master of Divinity. Programs will be offered both for graduate credit and in a not-for-credit format across Houston, and will vary depending on the campus. Among the locations, Houston Theological Seminary will be offering classes at the Woodway campus of Second Baptist Church.

Center for CHRISTIANITY in BUSINESS

THE PILLARS: Your background, you're from Hong Kong?

DR. ERNEST LIANG: Yes, I was born in Hong Kong in a Christian family. I graduated from college in Hong Kong and then went to the University of Chicago for my graduate education.

THE PILLARS: What degrees did you pursue?

DR. ERNEST LIANG: I got a masters in urban economics and urban planning, in finance, and then received a PhD from the joint study of economics and geography (or economic geography).

THE PILLARS: For 25 years you were in the corporate world. What did you do?

DR. ERNEST LIANG: What I found out in academia is that the knowledge that was incubated in the ivory tower is very rarely applicable to the business world and for the business people who are in the trenches. I decided to go into the corporate world and started out as chief economist for a regional economic consulting firm. Later I worked for a public software company as a treasurer and moved on as a CFO in another software company. Finally, I ended up at Halliburton, which is the number two oil field services company. I ran the corporate finance group there before I went into investment banking. After 10 years working on business transactions, I decided that God had another plan for me — the phone call came from a former dean of the College of Business at HBU. I said it was time and I moved here.

THE PILLARS: Now you lead the Center for Christianity in Business at HBU. What was the genesis of this unique business networking ministry?

DR. ERNEST LIANG: I had a strong passion about integrating faith and work, and by extension, about faith and learning. The dean and I decided we should try something like this called the Center for Christianity in Business. That was back in 2008.

THE PILLARS: Explain what the Center is about, your speakers and their topics, the enrichment and the spiritual factor.

DR. ERNEST LIANG: The Center has one mission — to empower, challenge, and equip Christian business leaders so they can integrate their faith into their work space. We do this through a variety of initiatives: Three times a year we put on luncheon events for local business people and we invite our students to attend. This has been very successful. We also publish a journal called the Christian Business Review, which is kind of the Christian alternative to the Harvard Business Review — high quality, practical articles for the Christian marketplace professional. We also have a mentoring conference which is geared toward the student body. We invite local CEOs to HBU to give their testimony to students — how they run their business as a believer and also give them their personal testimony on the challenges and the failures they have as a Christian business leader. This year, we launched a new initiative which is social media. We have engaged an outside firm, a fine Christian man who runs his own publishing business, to help us put the social media platforms which include forums, podcasts, and blogs.

THE PILLARS: Now the Archie W. Dunham Business School here at HBU is a growth engine. Why is it growing and why is it so attractive?

DR. ERNEST LIANG: The business school itself has a very unique mission because we have one thing that other business schools do not have – a Christ-centered message. What the Center does is to actually bring the Christian business community on to campus to show the students in person how that works. The church does not really prepare our young people well for connecting their vocational desires with their spiritual identity. We try to fill that gap. The students really get first-hand knowledge of how these successful business people, who are also strong Christians, run their business and how they don't have to be afraid of acting and practicing their beliefs and their faith as a worker.

THE PILLARS: Who are some of the other notables that you have had come speak and that you feel have had a distinctive message?

DR. ERNEST LIANG: We have a long list of speakers who really stand out. Most recently we had Robert Duncan, founder and chairman of Transwestern, and Howard Tellepsen, CEO of Tellepsen Cos., who talked about faith and how the company is leveraged on faith. Other guests we had include Mark McCollum, CFO of Halliburton; Norm Miller, Chairman of Interstate Batteries; Ron Blue, founder of Kingdom Advisors; Archie Dunham, ex-CEO of Conoco-Phillips, and Andrew Card, former chief of staff under President George W. Bush, among others. A long list of distinguished people.

THE PILLARS: Who disciplined you? Coming from Hong Kong, not really the bastion of Christianity, quite like Houston, how did you get so solid in your faith?

DR. ERNEST LIANG: I think I just learned from everybody and I enjoyed studying the Scripture. And I think that I learned a lot from the churches that I attend, especially Drs. Ed Young and Wallace Henley at Second Baptist Houston, my home church. I have also taught Sunday school for practically all my life, and you just have to keep learning.

THE PILLARS: Is a business major a compelling career to follow for a prospective student and why?

DR. ERNEST LIANG: Absolutely! I think that God created work for a purpose. It's a co-creative thing because we are created so we can do good work for God. There is a story about this guy going to a village and finding some workers building something and the first worker says, "Well this is so hard, I don't know what I'm doing. I'm just trying to make something of this dome." Then the other guy says, "Well I'm trying to make a statue of a big building, I don't know what it is. But it's not very interesting." And finally the third guy said with excitement, "I am building a cathedral!" That's the purpose in it, right? So that's the co-creative mandate that we have. Then we have communal purpose in business because, as John Wesley said, the original constitution of man, is the relation between brothers — being in a communal environment within an organization, within a business. That is the original purpose of how we have been created. Business is the only institution under the sun that actually creates value — you can grow by building something from nothing. God has a really interesting purpose for us to do just that through the business enterprises.

THE PILLARS: If I'm the young person, is there the prospect of a good job in today's America if you have a business degree?

DR. ERNEST LIANG: I think so. I think that everybody, whether they actually find their dream job on the first try or not, should try something. I think every job has a God purpose intended in it. Even though they might not like the job, they will learn something from that so they can move on to a better job along the way.

THE ARCHIE W. DUNHAM
COLLEGE OF BUSINESS

HBU'S GROWTH ENGINE

– DR. MICHAEL WEEKS

Dr. Michael Weeks

Dean, Archie W. Dunham College of Business
Professor of Management

PHOTOS BY DR. MICHAEL WEEKS

THE PILLARS: The College of Business is named for Mr. Dunham. Can you give a brief profile why?

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: Yes, Mr. Dunham has been the non-executive chair of Chesapeake Energy and former chairman of ConocoPhillips, and he recently made the largest contribution in HBU's history, so in honor of that we named the College of Business for him.

THE PILLARS: And your background?

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: My background is a little non-traditional for an academic administrator. I spent 21 years in the Air Force, but in the middle of my career, I transitioned to the academic world by teaching at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs. When I retired, I went into full-time academia rather than the aviation industry.

THE PILLARS: We have noticed that the business school is a growth engine at HBU, undergraduate and post graduate. Tell us why.

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: The business school reflects the modern economic environment. Modern society demands that we have an understanding of the workings of business, and there is a lot of demand for business training, which is a fairly broad curriculum. There is training in information systems, management, finance, accounting – the language of business. Our undergraduates get the language of business, and our graduate students get advanced training in that.

THE PILLARS: Give us the uniqueness of the Archie W. Dunham School of Business.

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: We have a unique mission. Our mission is to serve Christ by developing innovative leaders of character, and those words were deliberately chosen by the college: innovation, leadership, and character. We are looking to develop leaders that can be prepared for the changing economic environment.

THE PILLARS: And so, synoptically, the undergraduate degree includes what exactly?

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: Our undergraduate majors are Accounting, Finance, Marketing, International Business, and Management. Our graduate programs have four graduate degrees: a Master of Science in Human Resource Management, a traditional MBA, a Masters of International Business, and the Master of Accountancy, which prepares students for the CPA exam.

THE PILLARS: In the post graduate level, what's the most popular?

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: MBA by far. It is the generalist degree that prepares students for the broadest range of career options. But those students who want to sit for the CPA exam go through our Master of Accountancy program. Our Human Resource Management program is also very popular and was recently credentialed by the Society for Human Resource Management. Beyond that, we have a master's degree in International Business, which prepares students for the global marketplace. We have a lot of international students in this program.

THE PILLARS: What is the future vision of the business school?

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: Our first priority is to achieve AACSB International accreditation, which is the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business. AACSB is the top-level accreditation. In the meantime, we are strengthening our current programs. We have altered one of our courses so we now have a course specifically for managing innovation. We call it Managing Innovation Strategically and we teach students to evaluate not just technology, but also to evaluate the societal context around it.

THE PILLARS: Now your business school also has the Center for Christianity in Business (CCB) with Dr. Liang. Explain the uniqueness of that.

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: We need to expose our students to the practitioner environment. In other words, what our business leaders are doing out there. Students have to know that they can practice their Christian faith, and that it is not misaligned with the business world. That is the intersection of the academic world and the world of business. The CCB gives the Christian business leaders from Houston an outreach where they can come talk to other business leaders about issues of faith in the workplace – how they can manage their Christian life, as a good witness, a good steward for God's resources in the business world. These are very real issues that Christians deal with every day in the work place.

THE PILLARS: A number of leading Houston businessmen and women have been big backers of HBU historically and currently. Why is that?

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: David Brooks wrote a recent column in the New York Times called "The Big University," and he talked about how many of our landmark institutions, Harvard and others, were originally founded as religious institutions, but drifted away from that and are now completely secular. We recognize that all truth comes from biblical teaching and we want integrate faith and business. We don't see those as separate things, but as mutually reinforcing. Biblical principles lead to good business outcomes, and we want our students to recognize that.

THE PILLARS: Do you see the faith factor giving an edge in business and entrepreneurialism and success in business?

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: I think so. You know, I want to be careful. I don't think that it is necessarily God's mission that we be prosperous – God's mission is that we serve and worship

Him. To have a fulfilling life, we need to reflect the Christian faith so we feel like we are preparing our students for the most fulfilling life that they can have as a Christian and as a contributor to society. One of our new initiatives is to develop leaders of character. We thought hard about what that would mean, and we've added a course called Stewardship to the curriculum that will launch next year. It is a course in advanced ethics that has a practical application.

THE PILLARS: Does HBU have an advantage with Houston being the third most populated city in the U.S.?

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: I think it's a huge advantage. Houston is the most diverse metropolitan area in the U.S. and reflects that diversity. That is a strength for us. We have a tremendously diverse student body and faculty in the College of Business and that really adds strength.

THE PILLARS: Is there an entrepreneurial spirit to the city of Houston that gives an advantage to a prospective student?

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: We have a lot of entrepreneurial ventures in the healthcare and energy industries. We also have a lot of entrepreneurial energy in the real estate and finance sectors with links and internships in those key industries. Our students are well-prepared to succeed in the Houston economy after they leave HBU, and that will prepare them to succeed anywhere.

THE PILLARS: Let me also segue to the international business trips. Tell us about where you've been and then where you're going.

DR. MICHAEL WEEKS: Our graduate programs, our Master of International Business and our MBA, have an integrated international experience with them. Students take a two-week trip in conjunction with their international business course work. We take them to see the world. We spent time in South America, where we saw international entrepreneurs working to develop a range of products in Lima. That was a fantastic experience. We also went to Spain recently to get an experience in the EU. This year we're taking students to China. We take our students to see the world because we feel like, in order to understand the modern business environment, you really have to have an appreciation for the international environment.

Listen to Dr. Weeks discuss the future of Business at hbu.edu/p53-business.

After the children's home forgets his eighth birthday, he runs away. As he gets farther from his home and safety, Hamelin discovers that he is being summoned by the Ancient One and that his story is part of a great struggle between worlds and kingdoms, where the old myths of magic, evil contracts, and enslaved children longing for freedom turn out to be real.

THE PILLARS: Dr. Sloan, you have written a novel. Tell us about it.

DR. SLOAN: I have written the first volume of what I hope to be a three-volume trilogy. It's a young adult fantasy, and the idea is to tell a great story – one that will appeal to young teenagers, middle teenagers, and hit right in the sweet spot of their interest. I hope that it also does some shaping and some teaching along the way.

THE PILLARS: Give us the title and synopsis.

DR. SLOAN: The title is, Hamelin Stoop: The Lost Princess, and the Jewel of Periluna. The main character is Hamelin Stoop, and how he gets that name is part of the story. He has been left on the steps of an orphanage in Southwest Texas in the 1950s. Thus, begins his adventure of finding out who he is, and it is the age-old question of identity. Identity is a very basic and human question. What's your name? Who's your family? Where are you from? Those are just the basic human questions and, obviously, to know says a lot about yourself.

Along the way, Hamelin meets up with some interesting friends and goes into another world to look for a lost princess and to recover a very precious tool, so hence the title.

THE PILLARS: Give us the history of your writing.

DR. SLOAN: For me, I have always had the desire to write stories, even in grade school. Then, while in my twenties, I read the stories of C.S. Lewis and fell in love with the The Chronicles of Narnia and Lewis' Space Trilogy, and then read the novels of Charles Williams, which were supernatural thrillers. Of course, J.R.R. Tolkien and The Lord of the Rings, The Hobbit are the kind of stories I loved. I recall reading that C.S. Lewis said he wanted to write the kind of stories that he wanted to read. This is the story I loved to read, so that is at least my own personal history for it.

THE PILLARS: How long did it take you to write The Lost Princess, and the Jewel of Periluna?

DR. SLOAN: I took a long time to write this volume. I started it over 10 years ago. I had just left Baylor, and was on a study leave and thinking about what the next steps would be for the Lord's leading in my life, when I had this deep impulse to start writing. Writing young adult fiction has just always been on my bucket list. I started writing the book in 2005. I've written many articles, sermons, technical articles, and popular articles, so I thought this would be easy to do, but it wasn't. I found out I didn't know a thing about writing fiction, which is a different animal to itself. So I started reading about writing, and it took me a long time.

THE PILLARS: Is there any significance to the Lone Star State being the geography?

DR. SLOAN: Probably the only significance is that this is where I was raised. I am writing about places I know, but every person is completely fictional. You have to be able to describe the scene and know a place when you write about it. Some authors go to that place, or to places like it, if it is fictional. You have to build up a sense of place. I found that to be very important, so I wrote about something out of west Texas or southwest Texas, something that I knew a little bit about.

THE PILLARS: Although it's young adult fiction, I'm sure people of all ages will benefit from this book.

DR. SLOAN: I think so. The truth is, young adult fiction is widely read by adults. The Harry Potter books are young adult fiction, and of course the various vampire books, and the love stories that are out there now. These are so called young adult fiction, but are widely read by adults.

THE PILLARS: How can people get a copy of your book?

DR. SLOAN: It will be available through our website RobertBSloan.com and various other outlets like Amazon. We are still negotiating with some of the distributors now.

THE PILLARS: What is the strongest takeaway of the novel to you?

DR. SLOAN: For me, the strongest takeaway is the underlying mythology. It is the underlying story that I have tried to shape in such a way that, while it is not the same thing as the biblical story, it has a lot of resonance with it, if that makes any sense. Probably the biggest takeaway has to do with the characters and their friendship, their sense of mission, how they can not accomplish what they are supposed to accomplish unless they help each other. It is a story that has a lot of themes of loyalty, sacrifice, strength, courage, and failures – how to do something that's not just your own private mission in life, but actually part of a larger story, a larger mission, and purpose in life.

HBU STUDENTS TOUR ISRAEL: Learn connection of Israel's past to modern-day

A group of HBU students recently partnered with Passages Israel for a trip to Israel this June. Passages is an organization founded by the Museum of the Bible that partners with select Christian universities to introduce students to the Holy Land.

This trip was led by Dr. Philip Nation, director of content development, LifeWay Christian Resources; and the HBU's Associate Provost for Student Life

Whittington Goodwin.

The tour introduced students to both the ancient and modern areas of Israel. It included visits to traditional sites such as the Sea of Galilee, Nazareth, the Garden of Gethsemane, and The Garden Tomb. "During the tour we looked at the biblical sites with a view of deepening the students' spiritual lives and sharpening them as leaders," said Nation.

The students also visited sites which educated them about modern Israel.

This involved visits to the Yad Vashem to learn about the realities of the Holocaust. Along their travels, the students heard lectures from Dr. Faydra Shapiro, director of the Galilee Center for Jewish-Christian Relations, Yezreel Valley College.

The focus for the group was on understanding the connection between the Old Testament, New Testament, and modern-day Israel.

TRIO STUDENT SUPPORT SERVICES

New Federally Funded Program at HBU

The U.S. Education Department has awarded a $1.1 million grant to HBU to provide 140 students with the holistic support they need to continue to succeed. Funded through Student Support Services (SSS), the project will provide students with academic tutoring, assistance in course selection, information about financial aid and economic literacy, and support and resources to help students transfer from undergraduate to graduate or professional studies. Activities also include individualized counseling and career guidance, exposure to cultural events, and mentoring.

Cristina Ramos, director of TRIO SSS states, "We are excited to join in this new initiative on campus and to connect students, who are already successful at HBU, to a larger national network. This will help them graduate and continue on to graduate and professional schools, eventually becoming leaders in their chosen career fields."

Whit Goodwin, associate provost for student life, noted the importance of the program to help under-represented and at-risk students excel during their college experience. Goodwin states, "We strive to lead students in succeeding during college, so they will have the gifts and knowledge to exceed in every aspect of their lives at HBU and beyond. We believe this grant will not only help students graduate and pursue further education, but also will help develop them to be salt and light in the world in powerful and significant ways."

SSS is one of eight federal TRIO programs, which provide outreach and student services for students to help them progress through the academic pipeline from middle school to postbaccalaureate programs.

Hymns Concert UNVEILS RARE McKinney manuscript

McKinney's handwritten lyrics for I Fell In Love With Jesus.

B.B. McKinney

HBU's "History & Hymns" concert held recently was an evening of congregational singing of hymns, choral anthems, organ and piano arrangements, piano improvisations based on hymns, and vocal solos providing historical, political, and spiritual context for the hymns.

Dr. John Yarrington, the Schola Cantorum; pianist Dr. Dan Kramlich; and organist, Dr. Rhonda Furr, led an overflow crowd in an evening of hymn singing, with narration by the Dean of the School of Fine Arts Dr. Jason Lester.

One interesting event of the evening involved a tableau, representing an historic setting of hymn singing at home. The accompaniment was played on a 100-year-old pipe organ, graciously lent for the evening from his collection, by Mr. Percival Beacroft. Dean Lester provided interesting commentary on the history of each hymn sung.

Perhaps the highlight of the evening was the introduction of a never before published hymn by B.B. McKinney. It was found on the top shelf of the music supply room - box labeled "HBU Donation" that included a framed hand-written hymn text and a framed music manuscript with text.

"What caught my attention was B.B. McKinney's signature at the top left and right side of the manuscript (as author and composer)," said Dr. Rhonda Furr. The dedication read: "To My very dear friend, Brother Bill Turner." Below the manuscript was a hand-written note from William Turner:

"Written in August 1950 - Paisano - Occasion - Dr. Kyle Yates, pastor, Second Baptist, Houston - Bible Teacher at Assembly. Teaching John's Gospel. Made statement 'John fell in love with Jesus.' B.B. said to me, as we were seated on platform - 'Bill there is a song.' Whereupon he dashed off the lines below. Later he brought to me the music above. Wm Turner"

Dr. Furr went to great lengths to ensure that this was an original, non-published hymn by one of the most beloved hymn writers of the last century. No record of the hymn surfaced with online search or library inquiries, and the writing sample of McKinney's handwriting from Southwestern Seminary matched. Based on the research and evidence, Dr. Diana Severance, director of the Dunham Bible Museum, verified that it was indeed an original work previously unpublished by B. B. McKinney.

The manuscript is now in the Dunham Bible Museum's Lyceum, along with an exhibit of the Museum's collection

The Guild Awards Most Scholarships Ever for Academic Year

At The Guild's Silver Tea in April, Patti Bailey was honored for her longtime service and dedication to The Guild and HBU. This year's tea was held at the lovely home of Rhonda and Michael Graff, who graciously welcomed Guild members and their guests.

Guild President Jan Witham, along with Silver Tea Chairs Jeanne Walker, Lynn Tyger, and Debra Perich and their committees, worked tirelessly to make this Silver Tea a special occasion, a memorable event, and a successful fundraiser, enabling The Guild to further its mission of providing scholarships for HBU graduate students.

With the success of the Silver Tea underwriting, The Guild was able to award seven endowed scholarships and 25 annual scholarships, which represents the largest number of scholarships awarded for an academic year by The Guild. And, for the first time, scholarships were awarded to doctoral students in the College of Education and Behavioral Sciences, including The Guild Endowed Scholarship in Executive Educational Leadership.

Three Women That Saved America

AMERICAN MUSEUM SOCIETY LUNCHEON

The American Museum Society (AMS) held its annual Museum Day Luncheon at The Junior League of Houston with a Valentine Day theme.

Dr. Chris Hammons, director of the Center for Law & Liberty and professor of government at HBU, spoke to the audience, delighting members and guests with his presentation titled, "Three Women That Saved America."

The women Dr. Hammons spoke of were Abigail Adams, the wife of John Adams, the second president of the United States, and the mother of John Quincy Adams, the sixth president; Mary Rowlandson, a British American colonial author; and Pocahontas, the Native American woman, born around 1595, known for her involvement with English colonial settlement at Jamestown.

The American Museum Society was founded in 1965. The Museum was first housed in the Moody Library, and then moved to the Joella and Stewart Morris Cultural Arts Center in 2008. The Museum of Southern History, The Doll Museum, and the Dunham Bible Museum are all located on the campus of HBU in the Morris Cultural Arts Center.

The purpose of the American Museum Society is to support HBU's Museum of American Architecture and Decorative Arts through fund raising and events. The AMS also promotes public interest in the development of the cultural and educational aspects of the museum.

SIKORA WINS GOLD REMI AWARD & CO-PRODUCES FILM

Joshua Sikora, founder and director of the HBU Cinema & New Media Arts program, won the prestigious Gold Remi Award at the 49th Annual Houston International Film Festival for his short film, Nova.

The film, which is available online as part of The Seventh Spectrum anthology series, first premiered on Hulu in July 2014.

Incorporating real-life footage of the sun from space and animation of stellar phenomenon, Nova was a perfect fit for this year's NASA theme at the Houston International Film Festival.

Sikora also helped produce the film Manifest Destiny, a feature-length musical comedy adventure, loosely based on the historical Lewis & Clark expedition, which has been in production for the last three years by a small independent team based in California. Sikora consulted throughout the production process and provided integral support in post-production. William Hellmuth and the film's director, Anthony Parisi — both long-time collaborators with Sikora — spearheaded the production, which traveled throughout California and Oregon to provide the film's epic on-location scenery.

The film co-stars Cinema & New Media Arts faculty member Jesse GrothOlson.

The filmmakers expect to bring the film to Houston later this fall. Updates on future screenings can be found at the Manifest Destiny Facebook Page, and Blu-Rays, DVDs, and the film's sound track are all available for purchase at manifestdestinymovie.com.

HBU Retirees' Association

The HBU Retirees' Association allows retired administrators, faculty, staff, and their spouses to continue relationships enjoyed throughout their years on campus. Meeting three times each year for luncheons on campus, they enjoy hearing various speakers and receiving HBU updates. At their luncheon meetings, the Association members have an opportunity to exchange memories of their interactions with students and colleagues.

Founded in 1999, the group began actual meetings in 2001. Currently, there are over 70 members.

While primarily a membership organization facilitating social interactions, they also identify areas of need they can support. Recent contributions were made to support the travels in April of HBU's Schola Cantorum, which sang for the Baptist Musician's Association at Travis Avenue Baptist Church. In the past, the Association has contributed to scholarships, the Academic Success Center, and other activities.

Trip to the Holy Land

Over 100 friends of the University took advantage of the wonderful opportunity provided by HBU Tours to visit the Homeland of our Lord and Savior.

It was a 10-day historical, anthropological, and theological experience in Israel, filled with sights and lessons from the Bible.

This was the first trip to the Holy Land for most of the travelers. Current students, former students, their families, HBU faculty and staff, trustees, friends of the university and new acquaintances not only enjoyed Israel, but also their time spent with hosts President Robert Sloan and Sue Sloan, Vice President for Innovation and Strategic Marketing Dr. Jerry Johnston, and Dean of the School of Christian Thought Dr. Craig Evans.

The Mount of Olives, the Garden of Gethsemane, the Church of Nativity, the Cenacle, also known as the Upper Room where it is believed the Last Supper was held, Capernaum, where Peter lived, the Sea of Galilee, Caesarea Maritima, the City of David, Megiddo, the Dead Sea, the Temple Mount and the Western Wall, Masada, the River Jordan - to name a few of the many locations where Drs. Sloan and Evans brought the Bible to life by reading scripture to the travelers and describing the events and experiences of those living during that time.

Tunnels, hills, mountains, deserts, orchards, saltwater, freshwater were all within reach of a short bus ride.

This is first of what will be an annual HBU Journey of Biblical discovery, the plan for next Summer is to follow the footsteps of Paul to Greece and Rome. Join us!

Closing a Career

His teammates call him "Big Z" or simply "Z." Of course, Z is the first letter of his last name, but it can also mean "the end," "final," or "game over."

In his four seasons at HBU, senior right-handed relief pitcher Dylan Zarosky has become the most prolific closer in school history. For his career, he ranks third in school history with 68 appearances, most of those with the game hanging in the balance. With a 5-8 record, he ranks sixth in school history with a 2.64 ERA, owns the school record with 19 saves, and has struck out 90 in 85.1 innings.

This season, the Cypress, Texas native earned All-Southland Conference honorable mention, making 22 appearances, posting a 2-5 record, 1.95 ERA, and 45 strikeouts against 18 walks in 37.0 innings. He broke the HBU single-season saves record with 10, passing Danny Henry (1995), who had held the previous single-season record, and J.D. Sellers (1995-97) for the career saves mark.

"The records I've set are very important to me and it's truly an honor," Zarosky said. "As a freshman, I didn't imagine anything like this, I just wanted to help the team any way I could, but as a sophomore, I got a bigger role on the team, became the closer and had a good year. When I found out what the records were, I made them personal goals of mine. You have personal goals and you have team goals, and I think we've reached a lot of those in my time here, so it's been truly a blessing."

The Huskies achieved their goal twice during Zarosky's four-year career, claiming the Southland Conference Tournament championship and making the program's first NCAA postseason appearance in 2015 and winning the Great West Conference Tournament title in 2013.

"It's awesome being the closer and to set records that only benefit the team," Zarosky said. "If you set the home run record, you can hit three in a game and still lose, but the thing about getting a save is your team has to win. That's really cool to be part of all those wins and help the team win that many times."

Head baseball coach Jared Moon, who just completed his 11th season at his alma mater, and is a former catcher for the Huskies, has seen nearly every pitcher who has played at HBU.

"You couldn't ask for a better guy on and off the field – he has maintained a 3.7-3.8 GPA throughout his time here," Moon said. "He's going to be tough to replace. The records he broke had stood for a while, so I'm sure his will as well."

During his senior season, Zarosky's parents, Daniel and Theresa, who both are recently retired, rarely missed a game, whether at home or on the road – even the Huskies' four-game trip to California. Zarosky has enjoyed having his parents around for his final collegiate season, as well as his sister, Rachel. His close bond with his family can be traced back to Rachel's battle with cancer as a child. She is now 24 and has been cancer-free for going on 20 years now.

"Rachel has been great, my whole family is great and I love them death," Zarosky said. "I had to live with grandparents for long periods of time, because my parents would spend a lot of time with her in the hospital and, obviously, that wouldn't have been a great place for me to be. The courage that took for her, being so young – and it may help a little bit not knowing fully what we may know now – but looking back she's been a real blessing and I really can't imagine life without her or my parents. It's been a real help, whenever things get tough, to think about what she's overcome and where we are now – it makes things seem a little bit smaller."

While his final season at HBU recently came to a close, Zarosky hopes this is not the end of his baseball career.

"If the opportunity presents itself, I would love to keep playing," Zarosky said. "Obviously, I think many of us would. If not, then I can look back and say I gave it my all and continue on with life, but it's been a good ride so far."

Freshman Tay Nance is Soaring to New Heights

In only a span of four months, freshman long jumper Tay Nance broke two school records and became the first freshman field athlete in school history to qualify for the NCAA regionals.

In her first collegiate event, the Texas A&M Indoor Invitational, she beat the previous school record by .10 meters as she wrote her name into the record books with a leap of 11.68m/38'-4.0" on her second attempt. Entering her first Southland Conference meet, the indoor championships in February in Birmingham, Alabama, Nance earned a Top 15 finish with a jump of 11.55m/37'-10.75."

Nance set the outdoor school record in the triple jump four times this season, eventually leaping to 12.44m/40'-9.75" in the Southland Championships in May, a mark that not only qualified her for the NCAA West Regionals later that month, but a mark that head coach Theresa Fuqua said would put Nance on the medal stand in any other conference. In the competitive Southland Conference Outdoor Championships, Nance finished seventh out of 24 individuals.

"I was just as surprised as everyone else to learn I broke records," stated Nance, who first became involved in the sport in the fifth and sixth grade Tiger Challenge, where she ran sprints and started competing in jumping events. Nance, a native of Cleveland, Texas, graduated from Conroe High School.

HBU's First Year

A look back at the beach volleyball

The Spring 2016 semester marked the inaugural season for the HBU beach volleyball program. Posting a 7-11 record, the Huskies have begun a new chapter in athletics. One in the sand.

"Going in, everybody asked how it was going for us," head coach Trent Herman said. "We didn't really know what this was going to be like. We could map it out and say it will be 'this' way, but it was like playing with all freshmen. It really was, because it was new to all of them, at least at the collegiate level."

A beach volleyball match features five pairings competing in a best-of-three-sets format. The first two sets go to 21 points. If a decisive third set is called for, the winning team of both the set and match is the first to 15 points. All three sets must be won by a minimum of a two-point margin.

Jessica Wooten

Both teams switch sides throughout the sets, so each combat with sun and wind evenly. Matches are a best-of-five format.

"Every player that competes in beach volleyball knows their score impacts the outcome of winning or losing," assistant coach Cameron Sitler said. "In reality though, it is their result plus four other pairings that determine the result for the team. Our last weekend, we really grasped the concept of learning how to compete for your own win, but in the end also pushing for your team win, and that's crucial."

The Huskies brought in three players specifically for beach volleyball: freshmen Aerial Horton and Guinevere Meyer, and graduate student Haley Durham. Horton and Meyer spent all fall training with Durham joining after the semester change.

"In the fall, it was just (Meyer and I," Horton said. "We kind of had to figure things out on our own. (Durham) joined us and kind of guided us through it, but it wasn't until all the indoor girls joined our practices that we really started to feel like a team."

Nine indoor student-athletes made the crossover to beach - Rachel Angeles, Kayla Armer, Bailey Banks, Hailey Erickson, Laura Fox, Melissa

Elliott Finger passed away in February. He began his career in the accounting department at Finger Furniture, working with his father, Hyman. He lived a full life that included many achievements and experiences, but none were greater than the relationships he enjoyed with friends, family, associates and business partners, students, and the many lives he touched and made better by his enthusiasm and generous heart.

Dr. W. LeRay Fowler passed away June 14. He was a former member on the HBU Board of Trustees and retired pastor of West University Baptist Church. After his retirement, he served as chairman of Adopt an Annuitant, a committee which raised millions for Christian workers who had no retirement.

FORMER STUDENTS

Eddie Brown BA '72, passed away February 13. Brown, a 6'5" wing out of Madison, Mississippi, was a four-year letterman for the Huskies from 1968-1972 and is the school's all-time leading scorer with 1,939 points. He was also a proud graduate of HBU, earning his degree in four years and a U.S. Army veteran. Brown was inducted into HBU Hall of Honor in 2000, was a part of the Tip-Off Club Committee, and was a longtime front-row mainstay at home basketball games in Sharp Gym. Last season, he was honored as part of the 1970s All-Decade Team.

"We lost a true legend and ambassador for HBU and our basketball program. Eddie was very involved in our program and a mentor to many of our young men over the years. We will miss him greatly."

— Ron Cottrell, Head Basketball Coach, HBU

Dick Hudson '75 and his wife Margaret were called to be with their Lord on January 17. Their passing was one of great sadness and sorrow, as they were taken by a devastating fire at their home. Dick was extremely committed to his alma mater, serving on the Alumni Board of Directors, working closely with the Development Committee and the Scholarship Committee. He also served on the President's Leadership Council.

In 1991, Dick was the Distinguished Alumnus Award recipient for his exemplary leadership as the vice president for Global Marine. Additionally, Dick was the 1998 Meritorious Service Alumnus Award recipient due to his significant and sustained contributions of time and effort towards the advancement of the HBU Alumni Association.

With a mindset of giving and continuously impacting our students, Dick established the Wanda E. Hudson Endowed Scholarship in honor of his mother and the Margaret S. Hudson Endowed Scholarship to honor his wife.

Dick and Margie Hudson were neighbors of mine. More than a neighbor...Dick and Margie were true friends as indicated by their sincere concern for those close to them. Dick enjoyed life to the fullest which is the reason why so many were drawn to him...including me. The old cliché is true in this case...Dick was "larger than life".

Fuchs, Madison O'Brien, Ashlee Vann, and Jessica Wooten.

"I've been playing indoor volleyball all my life, so crossing over to beach was difficult," Wooten said. "You jump different in the sand. You set different. There's more thinking and strategy involved, because there's just two players. Communication is key."

The Huskies held their first full-team practice at the end of February and practiced for two weeks before opening their season on March 17 with a home dual against Texas A&M-Corpus Christi. Playing at Third Coast Volleyball, less than three miles from campus near Hillcroft and Harwin, HBU downed the Islanders, 3-2 and 5-0, to open the beach era.

"It was great to finally get out there and compete against someone other than ourselves," Horton said. "There was a great crowd on hand and you could tell there was a lot of excitement with beach volleyball officially getting underway. Beating Texas A&M-Corpus Christi was a great starting off point."

From there, the Huskies played their next 10 matches on the road, participating in tournaments at TCU, TAMU-CC, and Tulane. HBU picked up two more wins against the Islanders, while also testing themselves against established programs and different weather elements.

The TCU tournament – Fight at the Fort – pitted the Huskies against No. 2 Florida State, while the team saw three ranked opponents in No. 8 Georgia State, No. 12 LSU, and No. 18 Tulane, at the Green Wave Beach Invitational. Both FSU and GSU were a part of the eight-team field to advance to the first-ever NCAA Beach Volleyball Championship, with the Seminoles taking runner-up honors.

"We played some very tough competition," Wooten said. "Some of the programs we went up against were nationally ranked and had already been established for several years already, so it was a great way to gauge where we were and our progress."

HBU hosted its inaugural tournament – HBU Beach Invitational – across April 15-16 to close out its home schedule. There, the Huskies took runner-up honors with a 2-1 record, picking up 4-1 and 5-0 victories over New Orleans and Lee College, before being edged 3-2 by TAMU-CC.

HBU closed out its season at LSU's Battle on the Bayou on April 30. The Huskies picked up their seventh win with a 4-1 triumph over UNO, while also playing heavily contested sets in their matches against TCU and No. 18 Tulane. The HBU tandem of Armer and Durham won the No. 3 pairing against the Green Wave, 10-21, 21-19, 15-7, the first pairing win over a ranked opponent.

"For me, it has really worked out well," Herman said. "Being the first year, I don't think they knew quite what to expect, especially for our dual-sport athletes. Overall, it was a great experience for us as coaches and for the team. I'm excited to see what we are going to look like in the years to come."
